Audience Attention Curve

Source: Sue McConnell, Stanford University

Sue McConnell, Stanford University

- Rarely a time when 100% of the audience is listening to you.
- Most people pay attention during the first 5-10 minutes. After that, attention drops rapidly and only rises again at the end of your presentation.
- Only 50% of the audience pays attention at the end of a presentation, according to research.

Small group discussion

How does Steve Jobs convey ethos, pathos and logos?

Assignment: Group presentation

TOPIC: A company that you believe is making a positive impact on society.

- Your group will deliver a 15-minute presentation.
- Include company history and financial data
- Make sure that your thesis statement is clear and include verifiable evidence.
- You can use visual aids. Slides should have the full name of the person who prepared them at the bottom. One person from the team should upload the slides to eStudy.
- Cite sources of information on final slide.

Individual grading criteria

- Content and accuracy
- Teamwork and coordination
- Individual presentation skills (delivery)
- Creativity and originality
- Adherence to time limit

Groups

- Group 1 (Apple) – Victor, Alex, Oscar
- Group 2 (SpaceX) – Gerard, Oriol, Vicente, Albert, Alex
- Group 3 (TGTG) – Jofre, Guillem, Pablo, Marina, Nadim
- Group 4 (Glovo) – Alex, Ewen, Pau, Arnau, Tomas

Presentation Schedule

February 17– Groups 1 and 2

February 24 – Groups 3 and 4

March 3 – Groups 5 and 6

March 10 – Groups 7 and 8

Be prepared to present on your assigned day.

Tips for Group Presentations

- Introduce the team (have a captain)
- Pay attention to each other (keep your eye on the speaker)
- Remember to hand off among speakers (“Now Alex will talk about...”
“Next Marina will go over...”)
- If it’s your turn to speak, stand slightly in the foreground
- Practice your presentation individually and as a group

Vocal Delivery

- Speak slowly and clearly.
- Be aware of vocal tics (“uh,” “uhm,” etc.)
- Use pauses effectively (don’t be afraid of silence)

Body Language

Presentation Anxiety

- Breathe slowly and deeply as you begin. Your nervousness will subside after the first minute or so.
- Think of your anxiety/nervousness as a positive energy.
- Know your material thoroughly.
- Adopt a communication orientation, not a performance orientation.

Remember

Choose companies that are making a positive impact by asking:

- do they have a clear mission to address social and environmental issues?
- have they had measurable impacts or initiatives?
- what has been their recent business performance?

Managers vs. Executives

- Managers usually oversee teams of employees
- Executives usually oversee teams of managers

Management Skills - 2 Types

- Hard skills (technical knowledge and capabilities)
- Soft skills (communication, teamwork, interpersonal abilities)

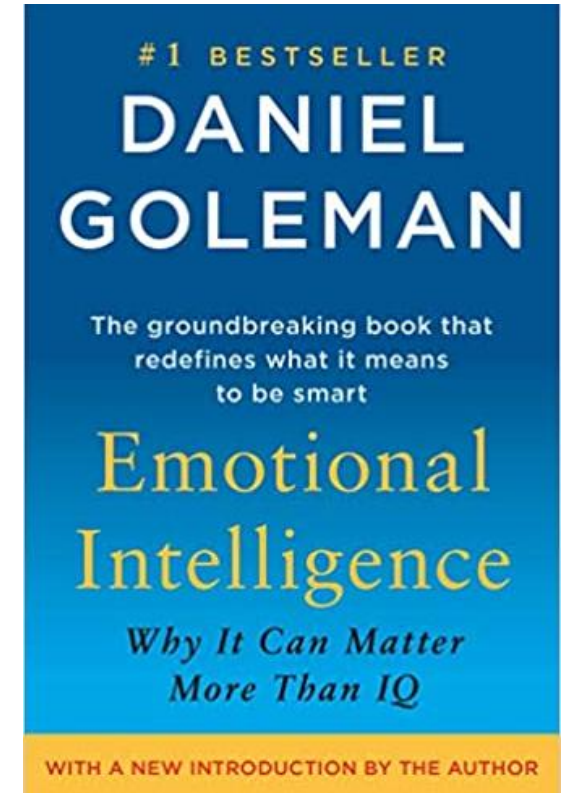

Daniel Goleman

- Author of Emotional Intelligence (1995)
- PhD in clinical psychology and personality development from Harvard.
- Emotional intelligence, especially the capacity to work with others, is just as important as other types of intelligence.

Emotional intelligence (Goleman)

- Self-awareness – self-assessment, self-confidence
- Self-management – self-control, initiative
- Social awareness – empathy, ability to meet others' needs
- Social skills – communication, teamwork, collaboration

(Goleman, 2004)

Goleman's 6 Leadership Styles

- Visionary¹ – able to mobilize people toward a goal
- Coaching – develops people for the future
- Affiliative – creates bonds and harmony
- Democratic – builds consensus
- Commanding² – demands compliance
- Pacesetting – expects excellence and self-direction

1 Goleman uses at least two different names for this style: authoritative and visionary.

2 Goleman uses three different names for this style: directive, coercive and commanding.
